

Learn to use the college admission calculator in 5 easy steps

Once the applicants have figured out that they need the help of a college admission calculator to calculate their chances of getting into a particular university, the next step is to find a reliable one. Even after finding a widely accepted calculator, it becomes troublesome to find one that is easy to use and is also authentic. However, it's very easy to use once the applicant comes to know about the factors that are considered and how to input the data into the form.

Most of the admission calculators follow the same steps and ask for more or less the same details but even then it can become confusing amidst the chaos! A student goes through a different phase every day when he/she is applying to colleges so if you too are someone going through the same, you can find help in the below-mentioned steps.

Input your biodata

The first thing you need to do after asking the question will I get into college is to find an authentic calculator that is known and used by others too, don't just believe the reviews! Check for yourself. The next step would be to mention the details and what they are. The applicant should be true while doing so because the calculator will base the results on these details as well.

Select your preferred colleges

Usually, the next step is to tick the preferred colleges or insert the names of the universities that the applicants want to study at. Once the calculator knows what the applicants' choices are, it would then gauge the information inserted against those credentials as different colleges have different sets of rules and regulations. The minimum threshold varies for colleges at which they'd accept the students therefore the college must be selected early on.

Upload your scores

Next big thing is to upload your scores, be it SAT or ACT whatever the applicant gave, on the website. These SAT and ACT scores carry the most weight in the college application process as based on these scores the applicants are filtered out. For example, someone who scored 90% better than all the students will surely get accepted into the top universities as compared to someone who scored 80% and so on. Therefore be mindful of the scores that you are putting in the calculator.

Mention your extra-skill set

It goes without saying that extracurricular activities play an important role in getting the applicant accepted to a university but when using a calculator, special mention of any such skill set shall be made. Not only the calculator but mention of any such activities should also be made in the college letter or essay that the applicant wishes to write. This would strengthen the case and make their application stand out from hundreds of thousands of other letters. This step is of paramount importance particularly when an applicant is using an Ivy League acceptance simulator.

Get your results!

Now that the applicant has entered the details as mentioned and followed all the above steps only thing left to do is to get their results. So best of luck to all those chaps that are looking for a promising future this year!

So this is all about using the admission calculator in 5 easy steps. If you still have any questions, you can ask us right away. We'd be more than happy to help you out.